

How can the library help you?

Library Services for Faculty

Faculty Development

Get personalized library service directly related to your library and information needs. Schedule a consultation with the librarian, who will be happy to provide training and assistance in the research or information areas of your choice.

Instructional Services

City College librarians are happy to provide instructional services in the form of library orientations, classroom lessons and subject-specific workshops relating to library and information services. Consult with your librarian regarding topics that meet your students' information needs.

Teaching Support

The library can assist you in finding and preparing teaching materials for classroom lessons. This includes finding articles for class discussion, as well as multimedia to be used in presentations. The library will conduct customized searches for media that support your teaching and can also explain relevant copyright protections.

Research Support

City College librarians are skilled information professionals ready to answer your reference questions and assist with information searches.

Information Literacy Course Integration

Do your students need help learning how to locate, use and evaluate information? Librarians can work with instructors to design assignments relevant to courses and at an appropriate level of information literacy expertise.

Electronic Resources

The City College libraries subscribe to a variety of online databases with access to thousands of full-text journals. Set up a consultation with your librarian if you aren't sure how to access/use these resources.

Booking Computer Labs & Equipment

Computer lab time can also be booked through the City College libraries and depending on location, computer and A/V equipment may also be available for checkout. See your librarian to find out more.

What is information literacy?

Information literacy refers to a person's ability to locate, evaluate and appropriately use information.
